The CEJLR brings together the skills of private law and criminal science lecturer-researchers and specialists in political science and public law.

Structured around three major areas (justices and trials, environment and territories, companies and insurances) the Center's approach is firmly multidisciplinary.

Since 2008, the latter has integrated the environment and sustainable development into its research themes. Recently he has been developing work in the field of digital law, in collaboration with other La Rochelle Université laboratories, including the L3i.

Disciplines — Private law . Criminal sciences .
Public law . Political science

— Societal challenges

Environmental law

By studying and implementing legal rules for the protection, management or restoration of coastal natural environments, CEJLR is involved in the preservation of these ecosystems.

Numeric

In recent years, the Centre has developed particular expertise in digital law, which transcends its three pillars. Research is carried out in particular on issues related to market law (competition - consumption - distribution) and labour law.

Territory

Because climate change amplifies environmental inequalities, the Center works on the law adaptation linked with this new form of threat, which concerns especially the Atlantic coast.

Crime

The Center has a lot of experience in this area. In addition to traditional themes such as criminology and criminal justice, he also explores the field of cybercrime.

Private law

CEJLR researchers, specialists in this field of law, participate in research projects related to contract and business domestic, european and inetrnational law.

– Research Network

The CEJLR participates in the Aquitaine network Europe, Law and Public Action (EDAP). Within this framework, it participates in research in European law and organises various annual events in conjunction with partner universities.

– Expertise Achievements

The Covid 19 crisis has delayed many projects, which have been gradually resumed since autumn 2021. In particular, collective research on the theme of port activities in the Charente Maritime should be completed in 2022.

Training

MASTER IN PUBLIC LAW

- ▶ programme Local authorities, environment and coastline

MASTER INSURANCE LAW

(Jointly accredited with University of Poitiers)

MASTER JUSTICE, TRIALS AND PROCEDURES

- ▶ programme Procedural Law

MASTER BUSINESS LAW

MASTER DIGITAL LAW

– Partnerships Collaborations

The research Center has the financial and technical support of several local authorities (Poitou-Charentes Region, General Council of Charente-Maritime, city of La Rochelle).

He has also developed close ties with the Regional Center for Professional Training of Lawyers in Poitiers. His research is conducted in collaboration with laboratories of other French universities (University of Poitiers and Limoges, University of Burgundy).

They also rely on associative networks both at the national level (including the French Criminology Association) and in Europe (including the European Association of Environmental Law).
